Internal Operations
Communications Team - Video Intern
Fall 2019 Application

The Division of Data Science and Information is looking for a talented video editor to join the Communications team. The Internal Operations Team specifically works on a variety of things such as developing the branding and marketing platform of the organization, managing the initiatives that draw all of our student programs together, and creating and maintaining a sense of data science community amongst the broader campus community. As the Communications Video Intern, you will play an important role by communicating the Division’s messages on online platforms not limited to our website and social media handles. You will be creating videos to highlight key messages and events during an exciting time of growth of Data Science on our campus.

Responsibilities

● Capture, edit, and produce high quality videos from different events.
● Work with other teams in the Division to develop short videos on the Division’s many programs and people.
● Create video assets for social media and the Division’s website.

Position Details

● Note: This position is paid.
● Average of 10-hour weekly commitment during the semester.

Qualifications

● Knowledge of video production and strong skills in camera operations
● An intuition for creating compelling, engaging, and differentiating content through strong storytelling skills
● Ability to work independently and as part of a team
● Able and willing to keep up with the demands of a fast-moving creative environment and adapt quickly to evolving processes
● Flexible and responsive
● Demonstrate video editing and production ability with a strong portfolio
